To cure Catarrh - the diseased membranes must be cured.

and Vulcanising neatly done.

Awfully aggravating to say the least.

Some folks use douches and snuffs -

But the trouble comes back again -

We found that Catarrh attacks the membranes.

We studied the matter for years

They get temporary relief-

So we reasoned like this -

Ves. worse than ever.

That's so, isn't it?

SLEEPING MIDNIGHT SPARROW an English sparrow that, the winter through has nightly slept alone on my window sill.]

FRANK B. CRESSEY. Little Birdie, sitting there, In the chill, the midnight air; Wonder who and what's your name, Tell me whence and why you came.

Are you homeless; this the why Like a wandering star from sky, You have chosen thus to come, Making window sill your home? Are you mateless, without one To comfort you, sad, alone; Or, have never had a mate— Always been so desolate? Or, was once a mate, a home, Little ones your precious own? And did earth b'ows cruel fall As to rob you of them all?

Are you human, just like men, Trouble now with joys have been Looking back by day, by night Ever sad with life's sad plight? Not from sin which you have done For of sin you sure have none; But you suffer because man 'Gainst God's love in action ran. Some men sorrow and repent That their lives in sin are spent, Thus to them God's angel brings Warmth and gladness on her wings

Yet, within your gentle breast There must be a blessed rest; One which tells of God's sweet love Sent to birdies from above.

Therefore 'tis that morning's light Is to you as vision bright Beck'ning to you from the sky Up from window bed to fly. Still for you my heart is stirred As I see you, little bird, Through my shelt ring window pane Sleeping there mid snow and rain. Gladly would I window raise, And permit your chirp of praise In my home to find a home,— Thus to free your need to roam.

But my love you could not know, Though I would but save from snow Your wee form of flesh and blood-Showing you my tend rest good. But forget you I will not For the lessons you have taught As I think of you at night Waiting for the earliest light. Rolled within your feath'ry robe You now seem but tiny globe, Yet you are as child divine Making e'en the darkness shine. So I leave you as you are In our world as twinkling star, Born and kept to teach manking Of God's ever thoughtful mind.

Mr. Aklason resigned from the latter position a few months ago on account of ill health and is now returning home by the way of India with his wife.

"Mr. Tirrell's appointment is a most popular one and a tribute to his well recognized abilities. He is only 29 years old which makes him probably the youngest principal of an educational institution of similar grade in the country. He was born at South Chatham, Mass., and is the

He went on that night almost crazed. Forty-eight hours without sleep and not much nourishment but black coffee did it, but in his brain were the thirty sides.

He played the three acts without a break, and he played them as Harrington could when he wanted to. But his big scene didn't come until the fourth. It was strongly written and intensely emotional. It depicted a final parting from the woman he loved, in Commonwealth of Massachusetts, intensely emotional. It depicted a final parting from the woman he loved, in a set lighted by blue borders, with the foots low. The exit of the leading woman was the cue for the first JOHN P. LOVELL.

Buscoe, all attention, stood in the side entrance as Harrington began. He was playing it low, but fleeedy, acting the beautifully. He had the audience St beautifulty. He had the audience breathless. Suddenly Buscoe felt for the curtain signal.

"Heavens!" he said under his breath, "He's way off the text."

Out in the welrd light of the blue borders Harrington raved on. Not a line he spoke had even been in the manuscript, but he talked of a parting from a woman. He was horribly earnest, and instead of cursing the woman he cursed himself. Bussed jammed the signal. The big drop began to slide. Harrington had gone up spasmodically from small parts to leads. While he was playing in stock on the way up he had written a play. Of course the play was never produced. And about that time Harrington began to come down. His coming down had not been spasmodic. It had been certain and sure as fate. He seemed, however, able to hold a position as stage door keeper. He could be scared into coming around on time for successive weeks by the threat that he would be assigned to the biliposter's forces.

And he was only thirty-five. Some times when he became very had he would mumble something about "Eleanor" didn't excuse his condition to Buscoe, who believed that there was no reason on earth good enough to keep a man away from the theater later than 7:30 and no trouble great enough to need an extended stay along a bar rail to drown She came out a little later and asked that some breakfast be sent in to him. "He will be able to act tonight, he anys," she told Buscoe. "He'll tell you about us when you go in." "I gather," said Buscoe, trying to be diplomatic, "that you are what alled bis."

and no trouble great enough to need an extended stay along a bar rail to drown it.

So. Harrington, with all his brilliancy, all his artistle training and his wonderful mind that could absorb thirty sides in a night, got finally to be, a back door keeper. It was only because he never attempted to excuse his conduct that Buscoe kept him at all. He was merely penitent after one of his periodical attacks.

And Harrington was the back door keeper when the company moved into New York for a run. He stood, book in hand, checking the company as it arrived for a rehearsal a day before the opening. Harrington got the note, with a doctor's certificate inclosed, telling that Temple, the leading man, had brain fever. He turned pale as he read it. He was that kind of a back door keeper.

Buscoe didn't turn pale, but every one who heard what he said a minute later did.

"Send a boy to the manager," he ordered. "Tell him Temple can't possibly on tomorrow night. Tell him that unless he wants me to use a bad understudy we'll have to postpone the opening."

From the base of the mountain the track polinted straight up, and I knew by the melting snow that I was not far behind him. I lost the track on a crumbling ridge, partly projecting through the snow, but soon discovered through the snow, but soon discovered it again.

Toward the summit of the mountain, in an open spot on the south side, near-ly inclosed by disintegrating pinnacles among which the sun heat reverberat-ed, making an isolated patch of warm climate, I found a fine garden full of rock cross, phlox, silene, draba and a few grasses, and in this garden I over-took the wanderer, enjoying a fine fresh meal, perhaps the first of the sea-

Harrington came over to him. "I haven't sent the boy yet," he said. "You know I can get up in that part by tomorrow night. Maybe they wouldn't know Temple wasn't playing it. If you'll let me'.— He looked wistfully at Buscoe.

"You could, you know," said Buscoe kindly, "but it's too important. They've been banking on this New York opening. A set of good notices will carry them the rest of the season, and I'd rather postpone than take any chances."

Harrington went mechanically back to the door. Buscoe held the company until he heard from headquarters "Use the understudy," said the note. "Can't possibly postpone."

Buscoe walked over to the call board. "Company called for all day rehearsal at 8 o'clock tomorrow," he wrote. "Now, Harrington," he said kindly, "you take this part to my hotel and begin on it. If you're letter perfect by tomorrow morning, you go on in Temple's place. At 4 o'clock this afternoon I'll come over. We'll work on it all flight."

"The hotel people wondered next morning what had been going on in "42" during the night. Two men had left at 7:30 in the morning with a bar bill of $2 for black coffee. It had gone up regularly every thirty minutes since 4 o'clock. Around on the walls were pinned strips of paper with meaningless seniences written upon them. They took them down and read them curiously. They seemed to be passages chosen broadcast from a book. They would have understood if they had known that the process of cramming thirty sides of typewritten manuscript into the brain of a man means that the brain must be stimulated with something and that strong coffee is the only harmless thing that will do it. They didn't know that a man's brain sometimes refuses to memorize past a certain amount, but that it will receive impressions of things seen. That was why some of the speches Harrington heak to the hotel number the mills that the will do it. They didn't know that a man's brain sometimes refuses to memorize past

In a recent report of the Chicago board of health it is stated that a study of the action of fruit juices upon the typhoid bacilius has brought out the interesting fact that, while lime juice, apple juice and the juice of the grape fruit all had a more or less inhibiting effect on the growth or vitality of these bacilli, bottled grape juice gave the most conclusive results. Cultures of the typhoid and the colon bacilli were used to infect both distilled water and water from the laboratory tap. Bottled grape juice was then added in proportions varying from 1 to 5 per cent. Examinations made at one minute intervals showed that some of the brands had killed the germs at the end of the first minute, the effect being almost instantaneous. The advantage of bottled grape juice, it is said, is that the quantity required, 1 per cent, does not affect the flavor of the water of disturb digestion, as lemon juice does with some individuals. The freshly extracted juice of the grape prepared in the laboratory had no effect on the bacilli, even in a proportion as high as 100 per cent.—New York Medical Record. In a few weeks there will be opened at Rome a very interesting establishment, the asylum founded by Verdi for musicians in their decilining years. It is for both sexes, is replete with modern comforts, and attached to it are charming gardens. The apartments of the men and women are entirely separate, but they will have saloon and dining room in common. The men will wear a coat and soft hat similar to those usually worn by the founder. Attached to the establishment will be a Verdi musoum full of the personal belongings of the founder. There will be accommodation for sixty men and forty women. A friend of Verdi has left a sum of money for the decentation of the crypt money for the decoration of the crypt where Verdi's remains lie.

Ledge of Plaster of Paris.

Forty acres of pure plaster of paris, from ten to fifty feet thick, is the result of the effort of two boys to smoke a rabbit out of a hole under a ledge on Gloss mountain, Wood county, O. T. The gypsum ledge was formerly the home of numberless wild creatures, which lived in the crevices of the rocks, using dry cow chips, sticks and other rubbish for their nests. The whole mountain side was a mass of flames almost immediately when fire was applied, and it burned for days. Only 300 degrees is required to convert gypsum into plaster of paris, and the ledge is being transformed into white powder.

FARM-FIELD THIS GARDEN

CORN CULTIVATION.

How Cutting Off Roots Influences the Yield Fer Acre.

A. D. Shamel of Illinois, whose work in the improvement of corn is well known, delivered an address recently before a Maryland farmers' institute on increasing the yield in eastern corn-fields. In this address, as reported by Orange Judd Farmer, he touches upon the importance of the right way the importance of the right way working corn as follows:

In general shallow, continued cultivation has given the best results. In deep cultivation the number of the roots of the corn plants cut off are roots of the corn plants cut off are about in proportion to the depth of cul-tivation and the closeness of the culti-vator shovels to the hill. At the Illinois station it was found that the yield per acre was reduced almost in proportion to the number of roots cut off. In a test of this matter the roots of a series of rows were cut off with a root pruner six inches from the hill three times in the season, different rows be-ing pruned at different depths. In general the average results of this pruning or root injury process were as follows: Rows with roots not pruned jelded 62 bushels per acre; with roots pruned two inches deep yielded 60 bushels; with roots pruned four inches deep yielded 45 bushels; with roots pruned six inches deep yielded 63 bushels.

The kind of cultivator will depend on the kind of soil and other conditions of each individual form. As a rule frequent cultivation is desirable during a dry season in order to conserve soil moisture, the number of cultivations depending in great part on the character of the season. All weeds should be kept out of the field, as every weed competes with the corn plants for plant food and light. As a matter of fact the weeds can be kept under control most economically by the proper course in the preparation of the seed bed.

"I know just how you feel," said she girl. I'd draw, and that's worse than writing. At one time it seemed to me that the world was dead to art, and I, too, wanted to go home. It was a hard fight, but I stayed, and now I'm glad I did. Don't give up, for the tide will turn when you least expect it. Perhaps I'm When you feel, said she paused nervously.

I have had enough experience with moles in loose, rich garden soil to know what a fearful nuisance they can make of themselves. Even for partial relief I think one must prepare for a long and stubborn fight. I doubt the efficacy of poisons. The only method by which the number of miles can be reduced, so far as known to me now, is trapping, says T. Greiner in Farm and Fireside. Get half a dozen traps. You can flight them at the hardware stores. Most large seedsmen keep them too. Examine them, and then use your own integrated in selecting traps; or make the efficacy of poisons. The only n Fireside. Get half a dozen traps. You can find them at the hardware stores. Most large seedsmen keep them too. Examine them, and then use your own ludgment in selecting traps; or make a number of figure 4 dead falls. If you are a skilfful trapper, you may have as good success with them as with factory made traps. Keep the traps set, and do not let up as long as the moles are about. You may have to clean out your own patch and then catch the moles that come from neighbors' moles that come from neighbors' lands but don't cease in your warfare until victory is yours. to the ground. If the netting is used as division fences between yards and there are male birds in the different yards, it will be necessary to have a number of boards at the bottom to keep them from fighting each other. All this can be very easily obviated, however, says an Ohio Farmer correspondent, by building a lath fence, such as is represented in the accompanying illustration, and it is not at all difficult of construction and will give a good appearance to any poultry house it should be largely adopted, especially when a division fence is desired between two yards to keep cockerels from fighting. What Specialties Are Profitable For Him in New England? With the strenuous, intensive sperialties of large farmers, as now prazland farmers, which one of their number discusses as follows in the Home-stead: By small farmers I mean those who follow a mixed course of farming, keeping perhaps a few cows and sellling a little butter, who keep two or three hogs, a few dozen hens, raise twenty-five to fifty bushels of potatoes, a few bushels of vegetables, fifty bushels of apples, an acre of corn and sell their products in local markets. By dint of close economy they manage to eke out a living from year to year, but lay up practically nothing for the year's effort and hard work. There are a good many men who answer to the above description in New England and who view the concentrative practices of present day farming with a good deal of alarm and, it seems to me, with good and well grounded reasons. It is a hard problem for those with limited means, who know only mixed farming and whose ing a little butter, who keep two or Leo-I wonder why the Widow Smith married such a small man? Positry Gives Quick Returns.

Poultry offers one good source and is not likely to be overdone for a long time to come. Small fruit can be made another source, and this, too, is in no danger of being overdone, as the demand for small fruit is growing constantly. Both of the above specials will give almost immediate results and enable the farmer to reap his benefits almost from the start. Out of door vegetables offer another special which might be made very profitable by improved methods of cultivation with horsepower. The above named specials could be substivided and only a particular branch followed, as poultry for eggs only or early broilers or capons TREE WARDEN. George L. Newton, North Weymout

In many of the narrow streams running through natural meadows the grass on each side is very tail and screens a man from the view of the fish. I have often known men to crawl to the edge of a stream and, cagefully reaching through the tail grass, put one hand in the stream and under the edge of the bank. When the hand came in contact with a big trout, the man would slowly begin scratching the fish on the stomach. This has the effect of making the fish curl up and apparently show great delight in the scratching. Slowly the man scratches along the body of the fish until he reaches the gills, when he runs one finger into the gill and hauls the laxy fish out of the water. This is frequently done. When so much, disbellef was expressed at the time-lifold the story. Senator Frye came to'my aid by saying that he had knowns the same thing to be done in the trout streams of Maine. Yes, Wyoming is the greatest fishing country on earth, but there is no way to catch troutshalf so agreeable as that with rod and line."—Washington Star. made those doors swing the other way and these brass plates had to stare such seeker after an office in the face as he entered the door, what a much larger number of people would be clamoring for admittance. If a man was reminded just as he was to approach the throne that a pull was necessary, he would undoubtedly go back at once and bring his "pull" with him. There may be some just criticism of the architectural improvements, but I believe here to be an instance of foresight which deserves commendation."

Lots of Catarrh Troubles Now

Awfully aggravating to say the least. Some folks use douches and snuffs -

They get temporary relief-But the trouble comes back again -Yes, worse than ever. We studied the matter for years.

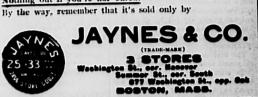

We found that Catarrh attacks the membranes. So we reasoned like this -To cure Catarrh - the diseased membranes must be cured. That's so, isn't it? We studied, and mixed, and filtered, and studied again.

After a long time we got results—good ones—
And we put the ingredients together into a bottle. We call it Vicona - Jaynes' Vicona. And it really and truly cures Catarrh. It has been curing our customers for two years.

All kinds of Catarrh too - Throat - Stomach - Bladder -Bowels -Or anywhere that the mucous membranes are diseased.

Yes, we are sure of it -So sure that we guarantee it. If Jaynes' Vicens fails to cure your case of Catarrh Why then-bring back the empty bottle and get your 63c.

That's the price. We mean it. Try it. Nothing out if you're not cured.

On Friday afternoon last, in one of the most hotly contested class games ever played in the gymnasium, the Junior girls lost to the Freshmen girls by a score of eleven to eight. This game was most interesting on account of the fact that if the Juniors won they would be the champion girls' team of the school and also there would be at for the championship of the school between Junior and Sophomore classes, but as it is the Juniors are beaten, the Freshmen girls are the champions and the banner undoubtedly go to the Sophomores.

The first half started with a rush and after some hard playing the Juniors scored the first goal, shortly afterwards the Freehmen scored their first one making the score two and two, much to their delight. For quite awhile neither side scored, but Miss Vining and Miss Looney made some brilliant plays, then Miss Thomas threw a basket and the Juniors went wild. Time was called shortly after this with the score of four to two in favor of the Juniors.

ifter this with the score of four to two in favor of the Juniors.

The second half began with practically the same teams except that Miss Fraser took Miss Griffin's place on the Freshmen team. Miss Carrell quickly scored the first goal teling the score; in a little while Miss Spear threw a basket and the score was six to four in favor of the Freshmen. Here the Junior girls took a brace and managed to throw a basket teing the score once more. Right after this Miss Looney made a fine play that pleased the spectators greatly.

-The coming belt has just been patented by P. F. Haviland, Washington street. It is unique and a novelty that will be welcomed by the belt-wearing public. The belt is made of leather or any other approved material; It is in three sections and held together by pieces of clastic. At the sides the leather overlaps the clastic and is held by a snap fastened when the belt is worn. If it should not feel just right, the lapse can be unfastened and then you will have an elastic belt which will at once conform to the body of the wearer. These belts are pronounced by physicians to be a strictly healthy belt and it will in no way distress the wearer as the other belts do in many cases. These belts are greatly appreciated by both ladies and gentlemen who have used them. They are made by Haviland Suspender Co. and are proving to be a great success.

An alarm was immediately sounded, but the Braintree fire department were so long in arriving at the scene, that, had the wind not blown from a favorable corner, all the buildings nearby and adjoining the one in fames, would have been burned to the ground. As it was, the flames were blown by a raging south wind into open fields beyond, and no damage done to others. The building was insured, but as a number of new tools had been placed in trecently, the loss exceeded the amount leasured for.

Asking Questions In Seciety. This from an authority: "Don't ask questions; don't mention names; listen occasionally, and you will find yourself a society favorite." The first "don't" placed. There is nothing which creates a pleasanter impression and which really leads to the most complete confidence than the tact which listens sympathetically to all a companion will say, but never probes deeper by an impulsive interrogation. One learns to trust such an acquaintance and feel in his company a peculiar sense of security that is very satisfying. Many of our small attempts to make an impressive recital are, we know, most vulnerable. One or two sharp queries would riddle them, and we learn, as a burned child learns to avoid the fire, just whom we may not and may impose them upon. The latter please us the better.

Why American Henley?

Just why the word Henley should be applied to the new rowing association's regatta, which will have its first trial on the Schuylkill river next July, as beyond the ken of American sportsmen who have in mind the attitude of the Henley stewards toward American rowing men generally. The Schuylkill regatta or the American regatta would certainly be a more appropriate title, and the aping spirit would be eliminated. The rowing element in this country is certainly strong enough and good enough in every way to stand on its own merit, so that if we are to have a really high class regatta let it be anything but a "Henley."—Leslie's Weekly.

Mrs. Ruggles disapproved—hysterically. James Anstruther said less, but thought more deeply. But in the end Elsa triumphed.

There were so many things, she insisted, that she would need for their little home when the wedding occurred in October—things without which she could not keep house, but which her mother's limited income would not permit her to buy. Seven dollars a week and her three meals daily, with absolutely nothing to do but hand out keys and mail! The hotel was within walking distance of their home, so she could save our their table in her absence.

Mrs. Ruggles had the old fashloned southern prejudice against business life for women. In a vague way she realized that it was perhaps a particularly perflous position in which to place her pretty daughter. Then, too, she looked forward with dread to the three meals alone each day. Little did her daughter realize how much she would save on the table, how seldom wust never know the trutt; it would grive her so, and I must find some reasonable excuse to offer her for leaving the hotel avae." "We must have a cab, dearest. You are still trembling."
Oh, the wealth of love and tenderness and protection in his tones! She clasped his arm lovingly.
"No, no; let us walk. I want to have time to think before I see mamma. She must never know the truth; it would grieve her se, and I must find some reasonable excuse to offer her for leaving the hotel at once."
And so, arm in arm and in the blessed silence of those who once more understand each other perfectly, they walked away from the glare of the entrance into the shadowy street that led toward—home.

she would set forth for herself more than ten and bread and fruit.

Anstruther felt the rooted objection which every good, manly follow must make at thought of his sweetheart working for her daily bread. He wanted to assume that burden himself, but Elsa had insisted upon waiting until every cent was paid on their homenest. Moreover, he disliked the publicity of it all, the phase of life which about their keys.

At first she was radiantly happy in her work. The manager of the hotel, Mr. Paxton, had been her father's friend and took more than passing interest in his new employee. It was pleasant to wear her long, trailing black skirt and a fresh, dainty shift waist every day and to sweep into the diling room, where well trained waiters served her. And pleasanter still it was to buy certain little usuries she had long wanted to add to her weeding outfit.

But by and by the serpent of enay raised its lead in her new found Eden. The regular guests passed her in such a bewildering varlety of frocks that her own simple outilt turned rusty in the reyes. Out of town peeple, in for a few days shopping, sent home C. O. D. packages that made her own purchases look absurdly small. She discovered that what appeared like luxuries to her were the divergody necessities to the majority of Stuycesant House guests. And why should these women who carried their beautiful gowns with such poor grace be given all the good things of life while she had so little to set off her natural attractions? There were the two daughters of a Butten mine operator who ware rings outside their gloves and timped the waiters with crisp bills. They had actually offered her a tip one day as she handed out their keys. Thinking of it all, a fever sometimes burned in her veins that even the overworked electric fan a hove he head and the could not counteract.

The editor of a weekly newspaper in Australia offers himself as a prize to the woman who writes the best essay on the duties of a wife. Elsa consulted both her mother and her flance, but with an air of finality that showed the futility of objections. A note of complaint sounded in her voice. She never went anywhere, while everybody at the hotel seemed to live for pleasure. Anstruther might have for pleasure. Anstruther might have some faint tradition of the deluge or flood of Noah. The Musquakies of reminded her that last year they had gone everywhere together, but that now he was denying himself every pleasure to make the hinal payment on their home. Instead he kissed her long and tenderly and said he felt quite sure that Mr. Paxtop would permit her to meet no one who was not a fit companion.

Danger in Crabs.
Crabs should be carefully cleaned before cooking. They often unexpectedly disagree with a healthy stomach. This is probably due to garbage, on which they feed. The purchaser should be careful to see that the lobsters or crabs panion.

It was a great evening for the unso-phisticated Elsa, who did not realize that the money Mr. Ainsiee lavished was his firm's and was used to ente-tain the customer rather than herself. In reality she was merely a side issue, a reward that Ainsiee felt he deserved for the offerts he was putting forth to are fresh, for they begin to putrefy al most as soon as dead.

The Oldest Cannon.
The oldest iron cannon in the world is at Edinburgh. It was made in 1455 and is thirteen feet long. The Schipperke.

The schipperke is one of the very few talliess dogs. Its name means lit-tle skipper and was gained from the fact that this dog was a common com-panion of the Flemish bargee. Liquid Glue. She wondered if all New York men would be like thisso excessively watchful of her comfort in small things, so entertaining in their persifiage and delicate in their flattery. She wished that Anstruther had secompanied them. Lately he had seemed so proccupied and was less mindful of her little needs when in public. Yet when she reached home she was not entirely sure that she had enjoyed the evening. Perhaps the serpent of discontent had raised his head too boldly this time.

The next evening as she was leaving her post Mr. Paxton came to her, wearing an anxious expression. The night clerk had been taken ill, and the chief day clerk had been called to the bedside of a dying sister. Could she, would she, stay on duty until he could secure some one to relieve her? He would gladly do so himself, but he had a political dinner on hand. Elsa promptly sent word to her mother, also a measure the first midnight, when some one would surely be able to take her place.

It was her first experience with Geneva.
Only 32 per cent of the inhabitants of Geneva are natives of the city; 21 per cent are from other Swiss places, and 47 per cent are foreigners. French poodles, for all their foppishness, are cast in the herote mold, as witness the latest story from Paris. A fire was razing in the Rue Monsiguy, and while the family shivered on the cobbles their poodle sprang through the flaming door, raced up the smoldering staircase and in a trice returned with the baby's doll in his jaws.

The first base ball game of the season was played last Saturday afternoon on the grounds of the Porter A. A. against the W.H.S. Atumnt, the lilgh school team winning by a score of 10 to 9. Reynolds surprised every one by his pitching, although he has no dazzling curves. The other players played well, but with more practice, they can improve a great deal. Some of the fellows of the Alumni had not touched a ball since last spring, and some of them falled to touch the ball on Saturday, though it was batted into their hands. The line up was as follows:

Last Sunday was e very joyous day at Trinity Church. The Easter festival was observed with great spirital enthusiasm. The church was beautifully decorated with potted plants, Easter lilies, roses, pinks, calla lilles and other flowers in honor of the great day of Resurrection. There was service with sermon and Holy Communion in the morning, and Rev. William Hyde preached a very spiritual and uplifting sermon on the "interest of the World in Easter." The special music for the service was exceedingly good and we'l rendered by the choir and organ?

Gentlemen's Supper.

The young men of the Union Church gave a very successful supper and entertainment in the church pariors last Welnesday evening. About one hundred sat down to supper. The entertainment consisted of a farce entitled "One of the Dewsenberries," also violin solos by Charles Leavitt accompanied by Mrs. J. F. Dwight. About the walls were arranged slihouettes of the men of the church. These excited great interest as some were very difficult to name. The sale and entertainment of which the laddes have charge is to be held the last of April.

When "The Great Light" was presented last November there was a great demand for its repetition from those who heard it, but it was deemed best to walt and let every one have something new given in the same style by the same chorus. The work on this is now under way and about the last of May there is to be given the Cantata of Ruth by the same chorus and under the same leadership. Although this cantata is well known to all lovers of good music, it is expected that it will at this time be brought back pleasantly to the minds of all. The canitat has its reputation and the chorus has shown what it can do and the result of the combination will doubtless be something well worth listening to.

"The right to make you happy," said Brooks.

The girl was silent. Her critical eyes saw Brooks, who was neither young nor handsome, at his best.

"Don't you think I wouldn't gain anything?" said the man. The silence was making him anxious.

"But you couldn't love me," plaintively. "You think love moneense, and women need it."

Brooks got possession of a hand not far away. "I could learn," he protested ardently.

The car that went to Overlook park was crowded; it usually was when here was a promise of a fine sunset. Brooks gazed steadily from the window on the unpicturesque side of the car. Even when the passengers crowd-club. Her clothes were imitated, her speeches repeated.

Brooks had wondered that so reserved a woman could be as popular. He had noticed that the charm of distinction was in her high bred face, and then thought no more about her. Women were not much in his line either.

Miss Hilderbrand had smiled down on him and said that she wanted him to come in and drink ten with her. And when she smiled the question of her popularity was settled.

After that day Brooks became a real member of the club. The women left younger men to talk to him; the men slapped him on the back, invited him to drinks' and voted him a fine old chap.

Academy.

He Wrote Books.

An English novellat tells an experience of a literary friend who went to the country in order to take a house on a farm. He saw the farmer and conducted the preliminary negotiations with perfect satisfaction to both sides. Presently he asked, "Would you like some references?" "No, no," said the farmer genially. "You are a gentleman. I can see straightforwardness written across your face. Don't bother about the references. I expect you want to get back to your business in the city." The friend mentioned that he had no business in the city. "Ob, then," said the farmer, "I suppose you have business outside the city." "No," he replied. "I am an author," "What!" cried the farmer. "Not an author that writes books?" Yes, he admitted that he had written books. A look of doubt crept over the honest farmer's face. "Well, well," he said, "to turn back to the business we were talking about, I think, after all, mister, I'll have to trouble you for a couple of them references." to drinks and voted him a fine old chap.

He began to enjoy the life and the new spirit of friendliness that pervaded the atmosphere. There was no more talk of leaving this circle of bright, pretty women and joily fellows. Brooks realized that he owed the change to Miss Hilderbrand. Once he asked her why she had taken him up, and she replied that she was sorry for lonely things.

Six months had made a new man of Brooks, and still he lingered.

The afternoon had again come for her to pour tea for the club members, but she had sent her excuses.

Johnston, a friend and fellow citizen of hers, said that she had gone on the mountain to be alone and get a grip on herself; that a telegram had brought her bad news.

The car climbed slowly.

Brooks hadn't the slightest idea what the trouble was nor what assistance he could render. There was but one de-sire in his houset heart, and that was to help her. How he would do it hadn't been revenled, but, with his usual di-rectness, he had followed her to find out.

On the mountain top the band played, and gay groups of people moved in every direction.

Brooks came upon Miss Hilderbrand, solitary in the midst of the crowd.
The glow of the sunset was on her,

"I'm not everybody," said Brooks stoutly, "I came because I want to comfort lonely things. What can I do?"
Miss Hilderbrand's glance went over Brooks' stout figure and came back to his clear eyes. The two faces were in sharp contrast—in his the rugged strength of a more simple civilization, in the girl's the suggestion of extreme culture.

"This is an old gentleman."
"Twouldn't do: highly improper."
"Oh, yes it would! It's eminently respectable." Brooks got to his feet and began speaking rapidly.
"Look here," he said, "I know you don't care for me, but you are the finest girl I ever saw. I'm too old to learn all love's little tricks, but you won't expect much foolishness. Tricks of Language.
Cunning in the use of language to give false impressions is a Yankee trick celebrated in song and story. Many instances of its use come to light in the testimony given in courts. An illustration of such dishonest craftiness is related by a Maine gentleman. A man came to him wanting him to buy a share in a country lottery in which the principal prize was a horse. at independence and self support had the gifts of a college education and years of foreign travel. This attempt at independence and self support had been treated as her latest whim and humored accordingly. He had scrambled from a common school education into the pitfalls that beset the path of a newspaper reporter. Every unward step had been bought at the price of hard work. It was but a short time since the problem of meeting his board bill had been an all important one.

That was the first of many calls, but the succeeding visits, while they strengthened his love, gave no courage for its declaration.

At last in his desperation a plan dawned upon him by which he might learn his fate and yet spare her the pain of a refusal. She had asked him to submit a story to the Symposium. He would send her one embodying his love and its hopelessness and offering tove and its hopelessness and offering two sequels for the choice of the read-er. In the one the lover should boldly set aside the barriers of position and woo and win his ladylove. In the other he should patiently bow to the inevitable and devote his life to the uncertain happiness of literary success.

He bent himself feverishly to the task. For several weeks he had not dared to trust himself to call upon her. She would understand the reason why when she read the story he addressed

It might have been minutes, it might have been hours, that he sat there staring at the scrap of paper. Then, with a groan, he buried his face in his arms, as if to shut out the words. His castle in Spain had fallen down about his cars, and he sat among the ruins.

The sun was setting when he rose brusquely and went out into the air to walk and walk in the hope that physical weariness might stifle his suffering. The coolness of night brought a dogged courage to blot out the past, with its day dreams, and turn to the fluture.

"Miss Cecil Travers—Mr. Philip Saunders."

Some benevolent individual introduced them at the Pen and Pencil club. Saunders afterward spoke of him as "the hand of fate." But then he was under the sway of the blind god and so unresponsible for either his remarks or his eyesight.

It was certainly a case of love at first sight—on the part of Saunders. When he looked down into the dark eyes raised so frankly to his own, he gave up his heart unconditionally. In all his thirty-five years nothing had sent the blood rushing so riotously through his veins as the firm, warm clasp of her hand.

But he was a quiet, self controlled fellow, with a composure born of years of struggle up the uncertain literary ladder. So he did not hold the little hand a 'second longer than politicaes demanded. There was no trace of eagerness in his manner as he sat down on the divan beside her and began to talk as few men and fewer women had heard him talk—brilliantly, with fashes of wit and sarcasm relieving the underlying carnestness of thought.

Cecil Travers was quite unconscious of the metamorphools she was producing. She only thought that this big, blound man was not nearly as unapproachable as he looked. He was really charming. And, what was the more remarkable, he did not talk about himself.

The girl found this an unusual experience. As reader for one of the magazines and writer of short stories, she had net many men of many minds. "Yet," as she said pathetically to herself, "the minds always seem to turn inward. How can they write about the world around them when they are so absorbed in self?"

Nature and Art In Greek Statues. Archeologists have observed that in Greek statues the male eye is strongly arched, while the female eye has rath-Greek statues the male cyc is strongly arched, while the female cyc has rather a flattened surface, and, referring to accounts by the older anatomists who have affirmed such a difference to exist, they have seen in this a fresh proof of the exact observation of nature by the ancient Greeks. The rule is not without exceptions, for the cornea in the Zeus of Otricoll has quite a flat form. Herr Greef recently set himself to inquire whether such a sexual difference actually exists, and from individual measurement of the radius of the cornea in the horizontal meridian he gets an average of 7.83 millimeters for men and 7.82 millimeters for men and 7.82 millimeters for women (Donders gives 7.83 and 7.799), so the difference is so small as to be imperceptible to the naked cyc. Measurement of other dimensions gave but minute differences also. The author concludes that the Greeks from artistic motives did not in this case follow nature.—London Nature.

CHIT-CHAT.

This is Chitterer's formal bow to Weymouth readers. It is with fear that I take my pen in hand to write for the location that I am told that Weymouthtes are coldly critical; that they have been fed so well that their tastes may be said to be somewhat satisfied with good things. Still, nothing venture nothing have, and inasmen as your good editor has placed this celumn at my disposal it is for me to make the most of it.

It is my intention to write for Weymouth all other matters outside of Weymouth that happen to be dealt with in this column must feel that there is some special significance in them to be so honograd.

Our friends across the line have a standing joke to the effect that we have no society in Weymouth, merely a soila fountain. Never mind. Even if that be true we can bless ourselves with the truth that the soila fountain is a good one. Then again it is mere jealousy that caused them to say such a mean thing. All thes society they have in Braintree does not amount to such an awful pile seems to society and the society they have in Braintree does not amount to such an awful pile seems that go to their Cochato Club you will see that a great proportion of such crowds that go to their Cochato Club you will see that a great proportion of such crowds are composed of Weymouthites. Then again it is mere jealousy that caused them to say such a mean thing. All thes society they have in Braintree does not amount to such an awful pile seems and it pleased him greatly to note that Weymouth hal at least three representatives. How many Weymouthles who way be hitting.

MUSIC.

The Chitterer was at the Boston Otherstral Club the other evening when that club was playing at Mrs. Gardners's palace and it pleased him greatly to note that Weymouth hal at least three representatives. How many Weymouthites know of this? To tell the truth Weymouth occupies a very enviable position in Bloston's musical world and as soon as I have gathered my data together it will be my great pleasure to impart to all of those who may care to Spring may be said to be here in very truth. At least you could say so if you were on the river last Monday. Several new boats went into commission. One of them bears the swell name of Katzenjammer. It is a 25-foot gasolene launch. It has very pretty lines. Not too much beam and would seem to be a speedy sort of a craft. W. L. Hendricks is the owner. The boat is moored at Watson's landing.

C. O. Miller has just completed his boat house. Mr. Miller is evidently aspiring to the title of commodore for he has three boats that will be placed in commission this coming week. Two power launches and one smaller craft.

MIDNIGHT BLAZE

Lose Many of Their Belongings. Lose Many of Their Belongings.

The residence of F. L. King, located just over the Weymouth line on Brookside road, East Braintree, was visited by a very destructive fire at a late hour last Friday night. In addition to the house-hold of Mr. King, the house was occupied by several lodgers and the family of E. J. Suiis, and it was shortly after 11.30 that one of the lodgers was aroused by the unusual heat in his room and awoke to lind a flere blaze in progress. Making a hasty toilet, he aroused the other immates of the hoese and then sounded an alarm from Box 24 of the Braintree fire alarm system. This was followed by a second alarm which summoned the apparatus from other parts of the town. Officer Walsh of Weymouth was soon upon the seene and realizing that the Braintree fire department would need assistance, he pulled in an alarm from Box 28 of the Weymouth the alarm system, which is dressed to his wife, and which it was supposed would give the reasons for the suicide, was opened and found to be a suicide, was opened and found to be a letter-from Mrs. Tirrell's sister. The mystery as to the reason for the act cannot be cleared further than the statement of the physicians that he was suffering from temporary aberration of the mind.

Mr. Tirrell was 67 years old and is survived by a widow, one son and two brothers, Alfred of Lynn and George A. Of Weymouth. He was a member of Orphana' Hope Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Weymouth. The remains were taken there Wednesday morning and funeral services were held at the chapel at the Village centerry at 2 o'clock, Rev. M. S. Nash officiating.

almost as much interested as the victims of the robbery, and that meant trouble.

Shorty realized this and resented it because it interfered with his reading. He always aread voraciously—between times—and, with the wherewithal for six months comfort on hand, he hated to be disturbed. He knew, in that mysterious way by which police news travels to those most interested, that he was under suspicion and, much against his inclinations, he was preparing to leave town until the atmosphere should clear.

In the meanwhile Maggie had become almost desperate. In her primitive way she was very much in love, and to see Shorty again was her one thought, day and night. Her fancy, wove a glamour about him that even Shorth himself would have repudiated with scorn had be known.

Then came the arrest, for the powers had been too much for him at last.

Maggie saw it in the papers, and a picture of her hero brought the shock home to her with sickening directness. She was dazed, stunned, hopeless, but still in love. Without saying anything to her mother she visited Shorty in the city prison.

Shorty began to realize something of the tunuit in the gir's heart. He follows the study of the tunuit in the gir's heart. He follows the study of the tunuit in the gir's heart. He follows the study of the tunuit in the gir's heart. He follows the same ween now she would not be able to resist him.

He knew that should he take her in his arms even now she would not be able to resist him.

Smething of her innate desire for what was good and true stole over him, and to his everlasting credit he did not resist it.

"I guess you're right, Maggie," he said brokenly. "I thought we could have gone away and been happy to getter, but-I guess you're right."

There was a world of gratitude in eyes see raised them to him, and his own eyes grew misty.

"Goodly," he said.

Shorty met the girl by appointment, and together they threaded their way through the crowded streets to one of the city's breathing spaces.

Shorty, pale and worn and somewhat chastened in spirit by his enforced seclusion, breathed the air of liberty, with ever growing delight.

It was good to be his own boss again, and with the realization came another thought—he was some one else's boss too. His hand touched the arm of the girl at his side, and a thrill of conscious power ran through him.

free, his heart had some out to the girl in a tender pity that left him a suppliant at her feet.

But now, a few hours later, this was forgotten. Something in his lawless nature crowded out all sense of gratitude and left only the selfish pride of man in his conquest.

They entered the park and sat down upon a bench partly sheltered from passing eyes by a bush.

Maggie's face looked very white in the growing dusk, and her eyes were fixed on the ground.

Shorty shifted about uneasily, and then, in lieu of anything better, he put his arm about her shoulders.

The girl shivered and drew away.

"What's the matter," said Shorty.

"You're not afraid of me, are you?"

"You're not afraid of me, are you?"

This was beyond Shorty's comprehension. "You're what?" he asked roughly.

"Oh, Shorty," cried the girl earnestly, "can't you understand that it's all over now and we must not see each other any more?"

"What d'ye mean?" he demanded. "Don't you know I'm going to take you away tomorrow. I got some money left, and," he added magnanimously, "we can get married before we go if you want to."

Maggie laid her hend upon the top rall of the bench and began to cry.

"I can't do it. I won't do it." she sobbed. "You must go away—alone."

Shorty did not know what to make of this. What did the girl want if she did not want him? Why had she visited him in the prison, worked for him, lied for him, if she did not want him?

"Aw. come off." he said gently. "What do you want, anyhow?"

"This," said the girl, springing to her feet and dashing the tears from her

His confidence in himself was weakening.

Upon the shore was a little shipyard all covered with chips and darkened driftwood. Rotting ways bathed their feet in the greenish water, and about them played the children they had given birth, a myriad of small boats upon the sleeping waves. One of these belonged to a higher caste than the others. There was a clean coat upon it, and proudly it rpde to a well made mooring. When the breeze would swing it slowly, the old man scated upon a last stretch of the ways could read its name.

"Mary!" he commented slowly, removing the pipe from his mouth and puffing out a cloud of grayish smoke. Then, turning to a man close by, he asked:

"D'ye s'pose why 'tis named Mary?"
"He's sweet on Mary Harte," said the other without displaying a bit of interest in anything save the chip he was whittling.

"Oh?" remarked the old one, grinning to himself and sticking the pipe back into his mouth, proving a bit of sentiment could not hure him from the habit. "Yere he comes now."

"He's got his oars along," said the other, looking across the quiet space of water, "D'ye s'pose he's goin' out?" "Reckon so, but 'tan't lookin' much out there on the bay. Glitin' a pesky fog up, I'm thinkin'," And the old man grunted at the foolishness of it. "Why in thunder don't he stay at home for once? O' late he's out on that stream

"I can't understand it," said the old man, smoking up on his pipe.

"Well, I can see through it in a way," admitted the whittler meditatively, admitted the whittler meditatively, "cause when I was young an' necessarily foolish I had the same thing in mind fer quite a spell. TRAIN AND TRACK.

All return railway tickets in Prussia are good for at least forty-five days. Acetylene headlights for Russian loom to been expended—the fifty dollars. It is supposed the dinners, say at twenty-five cents a plate,—that all will pay aside from our two fathers, they never pay, always being invited guests,—will pay the cost of getting them up. Now we still have the money, what will we do with it? I remember years ago the town woke up to the need of a fire department, bought a lot of old engines, and a great procession formed, led off by our selectmen in carriages; then came the steamers, say at ways being invited guests, may be grandens.

But, say, Regs, derned if I ever see such a fog as is gittin' up." The man perced off into the dense yellow cloak that had shut down upon him silent and awesome. He pulled up the anchor and started to row home.

The dull, monotonous chang of a lightous clang of a light

The dull, monotonous clang of a lighthouse bell came at intervals from somewhere. He knew not exactly where. He was getting bewildered in this smoky cloud of fog. Then he rested upon the oars, letting the boat drift, and listened intently for the mysterious note of the bell. It was farther off—lt seemed so—and which way?

Suddenly a strange, humming noise reached him—wind or— He fished hurriedly into a side locker for a horn and sent two long, harsh blasts across the unknown gaters. A loud, swishing sound could be heard, growing nearer, above a babble of impotent noise. A

CRIME OF THE TRAMP

The water and the boarse cry of a siren brought him terror. About the boat were only the moving mass of cloud-land and a few feet of lapping mater and there!"

Then a great, dense shape loomed up out of the sea like a ruthless grasping hand to crush him. Immense, terrible, to word, a weak excited bark of a frightened dog, a despairing wail from a man, and a white wave of foam man, and Choses by Proxy.

The man whose long suffering sister has always selected all his gifts for friends at Christmas, on birthdays and for weddings has recently passed through an experience which makes him feel that he must mend his ways. Not long sgo he went to pay a wedding call and expressed much admiration for the silver and china on the 5 o'clock tea table at which his pretty hostess was pouring tea. o'clock tea table at which his pretty hostess was pouring tea.

"Which cup do you like best?" she asked him archly. "Tell me, and you shall have your tea in it."

He looked helplessly at her and then at the cups. "Oh, I don't know. I think that is the prettiest, perhaps," he said, indicating an eggshell cup.

"Your taste hasn't changed, then. That is the one you gave me when my engagement was announced," she said gayly. And he endeavored to appear comfortable, although he knew his face was growing red.

Later on, as he rose to go, his hostess said:

said:
"What do you think of that picture over the mantel? I've seen you looking at it a number of times."
"I wasn't looking at that," said this luckless guest. "It's very fine, but I was looking at the smaller one on the left. It's a curious thing, sin'ti? Yet there's a sort of charm about it."
"I fancied you thought's owhen you sent it to me for a wedding gift," said the bride.—Exchange.

The man who undertook to cross the continent "on the hurricane deck of a donkey" and earn his expenses as he went was sure to have experiences worth something to himself if not to any one else. He had photographs made of himself and the donkey. These he sold for 25 cents each. At Yonkers his purse was light, and his bills were heavy. He said:

I resolved to rise at dawn and self-enough pictures to pay my bills if I
